1 Specification

S-0061 is an anthropomorphic entity with a defining characteristic of a deer's head instead of a normal head. Despite this unique feature, S-0061 is fully capable of expressing itself through human language and communication. S-0061 prefers to be addressed as "Dr. Deers". Dr. Deers strongly dislikes being referred to with impersonal pronouns and being unfairly judged based off appearance. He wears a uniform similar to the ones worn by corporate scientists, although the colour of the uniform differs from the standard corporate palette. S-0061 does not age, appearing to be around 48 in human years, and has remained so for 79 years as of the date of this document.

S-0061-1 is the designation for a fake keycard that S-0061 was provided with by the Corporation, which promptly acquired anomalous properties. S-0061-1 appears to somehow give S-0061 access to the corporation door systems and intranet databases.

2 Containment Procedures

Knowledge of S-0061 is restricted to levels Orange and above. Staff with levels White and Blue are to be told S-0061 is a persistent case of incorrect data entry. If staff assigned to S-0061 are demoted, mind erasure of all knowledge of S-0061 is to be completed before the demotion occurs.

S-0061 is to be contained within a conventional humanoid containment chamber, specially adapted to emulate a corporate office environment - similar to the surroundings typically provided to esteemed scientists of high rank within the Corporation. S-0061 is to be distracted with fake Corporation work in order to limit engagement with lower-level personnel to a minimum. Should S-0061 venture outside its designated space, he is to be monitored for possible interaction with staff, and persuasive measures should be employed to encourage his prompt return to the designated containment area.

Psychic training can be provided to staff to reduce the impact of S-0061's cognitive-hazard threats. In the event of any inadvertent interaction between S-0061 and staff members, strict protocols shall be implemented to ensure the utmost confidentiality and security. Following such encounters, all involved low-level personnel shall undergo thorough cognitive reconditioning procedures, to reduce the possibility of lasting cognitive-hazard effects. All staff members with psychic training, irrespective of their hierarchical position, should also receive comprehensive briefings, emphasising the importance of treating S-0061 as a regular member of staff, to avoid any chance of breaching containment protocols.

3 Behaviour

When S-0061 interacts with staff members within the Corporation who have not received psychic training, it exerts a cognitive-hazard effect. This effect causes staff members to perceive S-0061 as a superior figure within the Corporation. Remarkably, even S-0061 itself appears to be convinced of this perceived hierarchy, and both the entity and the staff remain oblivious to its abnormal characteristics. This cognitive effect manifests regardless of the mode of communication employed.

As a consequence, interactions between S-0061 and uninitiated staff often lead to the latter willingly carrying out research tasks upon the entity's request. Unfortunately, these tasks typically range from nonsensical to highly hazardous in nature. The experiments mandated by S-0061 include:

- Forcibly trying to fit as many Category-C personnel into S-0132 - "SOTI" - to determine the volume in "unit per Category-C". See [S-0132]
- The attempted removal of the arm of S-0138 - "Steel God That Won't Leave" - to determine if individual body parts could be contained. See [S-0138]

- Sending a manned mission into the pocket universe created by S-0036 - "Concrete Jungle" - with the sole objective of establishing a headquarters facility, dedicated to the development of a new gardening-themed television program. See [S-0036]
- Finding which member of staff at Facility 22 could hold their breath for the longest time, while in a room with elevated carbon dioxide levels and S-0024 - "The Fumigator", resulting in mass carbon monoxide poisoning. See [S-0024]

Attempts to halt or impede S-0061 will cause the cognitive effect to occur despite prior psychic training. After the conclusion of such experiments, staff involved in experiments ordered by S-0061 claim to have no memory of S-0061, or the experiment itself.

Despite our best attempts, S-0061 keeps finding time to work on the real anomaly Database. While attempts to contain S-0061's experiments have been unsuccessful, that which follows describes methods which are specifically tailored to try and negate the disastrous outcomes of the cognitive-hazard, using bureaucratic techniques.

In an attempt to nullify the effects of S-0061, attempts to change its rank within the corporate ladder. Below is a test log:

Behavioural Assessment 1

Description: S-0061 is given a pay cut with the fabricated reasoning being "financial difficulties" and "containment breaches".

Results: Little change, S-0061 appears to only have a mild mood change.

[FURTHER TESTING APPROVED]

Behavioural Assessment 2

Description: S-0061 is given a pay cut with no explanation.

Results: S-0061 begins working on real database anomaly entries before fabricated entries. After pay is increased again S-0061 remarks: "I knew his hard work would pay off!"

[FURTHER TESTING APPROVED]

Behavioural Assessment 3

Description: S-0061 is demoted after a staff member's death was faked and blamed on his experiment.

Results: For several days S-0061 cognito-aura had no effect on clearance level Orange and Purple. A system error caused S-0061 to be promoted after 3 weeks. The system became convinced a level ":" staff member had re-promoted S-0061. This staff member does not exist. Currently, the error has prevented S-0061 from being demoted again. Investigations into the anomalous nature of this bug are still pending.

Notes: Although it stopped working, it's noteworthy that for a while this worked. If we can fix this error, at least for periods of time we can more effectively contain S-0061.

[FURTHER TESTING APPROVED]

Behavioural Assessment 4

Description: S-0061 is fired after a fabricated event is blamed on S-0061.

Results: After being fired, S-0061 disappeared from the site. S-0061 was found a week later at Facility 7, causing a massive containment breach at Facility 7. After the event, the facility fired S-0061 returning S-0061 to Facility 18.

[FURTHER TESTING APPROVED]

4 Origination

The origin of S-0061 within the corporation's ranks traces back to a rather extraordinary event in the early days of the Corporation's transition to anomalous entity containment, during the 1990s — an application for employment. S-0061 approached the Corporation seeking a position within its esteemed scientific community. Due to S-0061's cognitive hazard effect, S-0061 was successful in his application for a position within the Corporation. However, it was not until an internal circulation of a photograph featuring S-0061 alongside fellow scientists that individuals who had not directly interacted with S-0061 noticed the distinct and peculiar attributes possessed by S-0061.

S-0061 was put under secretive oversight, but was allowed to continue working at the Facility, since attempts to contain S-0061 were unsuccessful due to the perception that S-0061 held a higher rank or status within the organisation, even by Purple Clearance Level personnel. As a result, S-0061 remains under constant surveillance while continuing to fulfil duties at the Facility.

5 Postscript

5.1 Addendum 1

What follows is an extract of an interview conducted by Dr. Rathers to S-0061.

[START OF TRANSCRIPT]

[05/11, 16:48] S-0061: Ah! Good Morning Rathers, what may be the reason you come in today?

[05/11, 16:48] Dr. Rathers: I Just have a few questions for a site mandated testimonial for the higher up's.

[05/11, 16:48] S-0061: Of course you do... go on.

[05/11, 16:49] Dr. Rathers: When were you first hired by the Corporation?

[05/11, 16:49] S-0061: You know very well that information is classified to someone at your ranking.

[05/11, 16:49] Dr. Rathers: Do you remember being hired?

[05/11, 16:49] S-0061: Of course I remember being hired, Rathers. It's not something you forget. I'm not answering any more questions related to this Rathers.

[05/11, 16:49] Dr. Rathers: Do you remember your first assignment Dr. Deers?

[05/11, 16:49] S-0061: What kind of inquisition is this? Did you just not hear me that I'm not answering any more of you questions? Look, Rathers I've been working here a long time and I know all the tricks. You're not going to get me to say anything you can use in that little recording device you have in your coat, ok?

[05/11, 16:50] Dr. Rathers: I don't know what you're referencing...

[05/11, 16:50] S-0061: Look, you can leave right now, and I won't report you to the higher ups. I know you think I'm some anomaly, and it's not the first time it's happened, Rathers. I've got a tonne of paperwork on this new S-██████ and little time in the rest of my shift. Please leave Rathers.
