1 Specification

The exact physical nature of S-0200 is unknown as it is impossible to fully observe the Subject. It appears that S-0200 is quantumly locked to only exist when not being directly observed and so it is impossible to discern what it physically looks like. Despite this there are clear indicators of the presence of S-0200, such as incident 0200-A. [See addendum 1]

2 Containment Procedures

Due to the unobservable nature of S-0200 it is impossible to contain in its raw form. So far, the only known way to contain this Subject is to contain a host of S-0200 before it leaves the host's vessel. As noted in incident 0200-A, the animated body that played host to S-0200 became hostile and killed a number of containment staff. [See addendum 1] At the facility it is paramount that S-0200 is kept in an atomically sealed chamber at all times, there is no need to ever open this chamber unless there has been a breach in security.

3 Behaviour

Behavioural Assessment 1 The study of S-0200's behaviour has been challenging. The only time its physical behaviour has been observed is when it is controlling corpses. This behaviour it exhibits when doing so has only been hostile with it attempting to attack any other living organism it sees. We have also been able to deduce that it is hostile when not controlling corpses as well, due to fact that the only corpses it controls are ones of its own making. There has been no opportunity for attempted communication in either of its forms so ultimately its behaviour and motives are unknown, and it is important to assume that S-0200 will always be hostile to any living thing. [FURTHER TESTING APPROVED]

Behavioural Assessment 2 A notable exhibition of its hostile behaviour occurred during a containment breach at its facility, where its chamber no longer became atomically sealed. After this breach a number of security personnel were perforated similarly to the original corpse discovered and became hostile shortly after. This had minimal casualties, only those in the immediate area of its chamber were affected, it was contained in the same way it had been done before. [ALL FUTURE TESTING SUSPENDED]

4 Origination

The actual origination of S-0200 is only theory. It is believed that S-0200 is an aberration in our reality caused by a partial overlap between our universe and another. As a result, it has been theorised that S-0200 is an independent entity living in an alternate universe that may be completely unaware of the affects it is having in ours. [See addendum 2] Likewise our interactions with S-0200 might be causing unforeseen consequences in this alternate universe. The assumed acquisition of S-0200 by the Corporation happened after incident 0200-A, whereby it was necessary for a heavy-duty containment squad to provide assistance in its capture. [See addendum 1] Dr Cullingham oversaw its transportation to a containment facility, where it has been placed in 10m x 10m atomically sealed chamber.

5 Postscript

5.1 Addendum 1

Incident 0200-A is the incident that first made the Corporation aware of S-0200's existence. What follows is a section of the case file reporting the incident.

...a man from ██████, now known as S-0200-1, described S-0200 as an "apparition, shadowy entity that only ever existed in his peripheral vision, while walking his dog through a wooded copse in ██████ national park. After giving this description to the authorities it was promptly followed by S-0200-1 succumbing to the known effects of S-0200, at which point authorities were alerted and containment was attempted.

When the containment crew arrived, attended by Dr. Cullingham, he pronounced S-0200-1 dead on the scene and also noted a number of perforations on his exposed skin, similar to injuries sustained when skin is exposed to jets of pressurised air. Dr Cullingham also noted that the body of the victim almost seemed hollowed out (an extensive analysis of the body was not available). While attempting to find S-0200 and contain it, the body of S-0200-1 reanimated and became hostile. Dr Cullingham concluded that that it was S-0200 controlling the body of S-0200-1.

S-0200 was held responsible for killing a number of containment staff. When done with the original host, S-0200 appeared to disintegrate the body of S-0200-1 and thus, in its raw form, without a host it became unobservable. After the destruction of the body of the original host it was able to control the body of multiple dead containment personnel simultaneously, affecting them with the same epidermal perforations.

Eventually when more heavy-duty containment personnel arrived the only way to contain it was to contain the bodies it was controlling in containers that were atomically sealed. After the bodies controlled by S-0200 were contained in such containers they disintegrated like the original body described by Dr Cullingham. It is technically unknown whether or not S-0200 was completely contained or not during incident 0200-A, as there is no way to prove its physical presence once it has stopped controlling the bodies, however the containment was believed to be a success due to the discontinuation of corpses being reanimated and the occurrence following incidents at its containment facility in England.

5.2 Addendum 2

Personal report from Dr Cullingham about the theorised origination of S-0200:

At first, I thought this must have been some type of airborne miasma due to the perforations on the victims' body, I believed something physical, and observable must have made those holes, but we have never been able to observe this one. This is infuriating, how can something that isn't physically observable cause this destruction in the physical universe, unless it isn't from this universe. Could it be that S-0200 is affecting our universe from another, is there some type of bridge connecting our universe. If only there was a way to communicate with S-0200 this would become clear, perhaps if I [The information here has been removed under the request of Dr Archibald Cullingham] I could bridge the gap myself.
