1 Specification

S-0201 physically appears to be identical to a Caucasian man in his seventies. It has no remarkable physical attributes, and looks quite ordinary. It wears clothes typically seen on a person of that age: beige trousers, a maroon shirt, and a dark grey jacket. It is always located on the same sofa, S-0201-1, sat off to the left-hand side on it. The entity itself is not human as it displays no vital signs that a human would usually have. We have been unable to fully discern whether it is organic or synthetic, as any attempt to acquire a biopsy sample has been unsuccessful.

2 Containment Procedures

S-0201 poses no risk of a containment breach that we are aware of. S-0201 and S-0201-1 that it sits on are inseparable and should be located within a standard containment cell. Access to the cell should be restricted, with special access granted only to researchers with high enough clearance levels See [clearance level protocols].

3 Behaviour

Behavioural Assessment 1 S-0201 only exhibits behaviour in very specific circumstances. When an individual sits next to it, on S-0201-1, it turns its head to that person. Without any further interaction, the person vanishes with no trace left behind. The only other known interaction it engages with is when someone tries to touch it, in which case the same vanishing happens. It only seems to do this with living organic material, attempts made with inorganic or deceased material do not elicit the same result.

This behaviour can be utilised; however, it is advised to be very cautious when doing so, due to the nature of the vanishing See [addendum 1]. S-0201 can be used to help neutralise other Subjects that may have escaped containment, if you move the sofa with S-0201 in such a way that it comes into contact with another living and organic Subject, it causes the Subject to be temporally shifted, causing it to disappear. This was first used to neutralise [REDACTED], it has not been used again See [addendum 2].

[ALL FUTURE TESTING SUSPENDED]

4 Origination

S-0201 was first discovered inside the home of a man who allegedly went missing in Phoenix, Arizona See [figure 1]. It has been speculated that S-0201 is, in fact, the missing man. However, this cannot be proven because we cannot gather any biological information other than the appearance of S-0201, and the identity of the missing man hasn't been confirmed. The only known evidence that a man went missing is that there was reported activity from within the home, then it suddenly stopped. The Corporation has been unable to find any information proving or disproving the existence of a man in the house prior to the discovery of S-0201.

After activity in the house stopped it was searched due to an odour complaint caused by decomposing food. This is when S-0201 was first discovered and caused its first victim to disappear. After this, the Corporation took control of the situation. After the realisation that it was impossible to move S-0201 by itself, S-0201-1 that it was sat on was instead moved with the Subject remaining seated on it. From here it was safely contained with a Corporate facility without any further casualties.

5 Postscript

5.1 Addendum 1

When S-0201 vanishes someone, it has been discovered that it sends them back in time, by a seemingly random number of years, to a random location. This was first discovered after a Category-C personnel was sent to sit next to it. After C-2981 was vanished, Dr Pablo Escuchar came to the head research team and explained that he was in fact C-2981 when he was 21. He provided irrefutable evidence that it was him. This wasn't discovered earlier by Corporation background checks due to the fact that once Category-C personnel are acquired, all of their personal information is expunged. During the vetting process of Dr Escuchar, the absence of information on him before he was 21 was credited to the collapse of his country of origin - The Confederation of Andes - where the regime notoriously destroyed documents and information of many of its citizens.

Dr Escuchar explained that he couldn't tell anyone his true identity until after his original self was sent back in time, otherwise it risked a universe paradox. Dr Escuchar was sent 30 years back in time at the age of 21 where he went on to research time travel, this is what led to his recruitment by the Corporation as, by the time he was recruited, he had a very high level of expertise on the subject.

5.2 Addendum 2

After ██████ was sent back in time using S-0201 after a containment breach at Facility ████, it was then discovered that the previously unknown cause of the Xuancheng massacre was actually ██████. This is why extreme caution is advised when using S-0201 to vanish certain other subjects, as it can cause catastrophic events.
