1 Specification

S-0135 takes the form of a wall-mounted metallic water fountain. S-0135 always appears mounted 10 cm from the floor, but scarce observations have shown this value to reach as high as 20 cm. S-0135 always manifests with at least 2 distinct service points, one being for abled-bodied individuals, and one being for disabled-bodied individuals; except in the case that no disabled-bodied individuals are present in the housing Facility, then S-0135 will replace the service point with a dysfunctional one. S-0135 in rare cases manifests a third service point to accommodate anomalies with human-centric amenities. This additional service point has been recorded to have exceptionally exotic designs in order to maximise accessibility for the said anomalies. S-0135 additionally produces various instances of S-0135-1, which present as laminated advertisement posters encouraging housing facility staff to drink from S-0135. Investigation into possible Cognitohazards produced by S-0135-1 is still undergoing. Instances of S-0135-2, known colloquially as "Wraiths" are invisible worker hazards. These wraiths are currently under hazard assessment review, but currently seem to pose no outstanding threat, outside of S-0135 known behaviours.

2 Containment Procedures

S-0135 by its nature does not need substantial containment procedures. A log of S-0135's current location within the housing Facility should be kept. When S-0135 is seen, it should be reported to the on-site Containment Officer, and the new location should be updated. If the housing facility chooses not to take advantage of S-0135's psychoactive effects, S-0135's service points should be wrapped in tin foil, and a warning sign should be placed no further than a metre away, and should uphold Corporation anomalous hazard warning sign guidelines. Due to S-0135's liquid having addictive properties, those who drink from S-0135 should be logged, and not allowed to drink from S-0135 for at least a week. If S-0135 appears in any active containment cells in the housing facility, outside of the mandated use, a report of major containment breach should be filed with the Facility Correspondence team immediately. The correspondence team will work with the housing facility to relocate the affected anomaly or relocate S-0135 itself. S-0135-1 and S-0135-2 have no outstanding containment procedures, however, it is recommended that the housing facility removes all instances of S-0135-1 to avoid any potential negative effects. This remains a recommendation as S-0135-1's Cognitohazard status is currently undecided.

3 Behaviour

The water produced from S-0135 creates an intense psychoactive effect when ingested. Those who drink liquid from S-0135 report a refreshing and rejuvenated feeling, magnitudes higher than other traditional drugs within a similar psychoactive bracket. Liquid dispersed from S-0135 also has significant regenerative effects, healing wounds with an accelerated speed. This regenerative effect appears to even improve the condition of those ingesting it, beyond their normal state of health. Accelerated muscle growth can be apparent for days after ingestion.

When S-0135 is damaged to the point of dysfunction, instances of S-0135-1 begin to display religious imagery of hell and messages related to judgment. These religious messages are not tied to any single religion but are rather an amalgamation of various spiritual iconography and ideas found in human religions. Upon receiving irreparable damage, after a certain variable interval of time, instances of S-0135-2 will spawn from an area of a metre of the wall to which S-0135 is attached. They will begin to move to the object or individual that caused the damage and ██████████, leaving them a dried husk. This does not immediately kill the victim, however. We now refer to the victim as OBJECT-1.

OBJECT-1 is dragged by the invisible instances of S-0135-2, back into the wall where they initially surfaced. Once OBJECT-1 has been taken, S-0135 will disappear along with them, reappearing on a random wall in the housing Facility; only leaving a residue of ash and brimstone behind. Occasionally, these pieces of residue are on fire.

Much of the behaviour of S-0135 was known before any behavioural tests were conducted. S-0135 appeared on the western wall of the containment cell housing S-0043 'The Horned Usurper' [See S-0043], On the 19th of March, 2078, after it was damaged during INCIDENT-0135-G. This was reported to the Facility Correspondence Team, but given the rare opportunity to determine the possibility of using S-0135 as a termination tool for anomalies, the first and last behavioural evaluation of S-0135 was performed. The results speak for themselves.

Behavioural Assessment 1 S-0043 was asked to damage S-0135. S-0043 was not in accordance with the demands of the research team, so S-0135 was intentionally damaged by a small plastic explosive device placed on its exterior. S-0135 was seriously damaged beyond repair. Exactly 3 minutes and 46 seconds after S-0135 was damaged, instances of S-0135-2 began to surface from the western wall of S-0043's containment cell, as denoted by the instinctive warping effect that appears on the affected surfaces. S-0043 begins to converse with instances of S-0135-2. It is uncertain how many instances are currently present in the room, but observational data suggest that S-0043 is not only aware of their presence and can see them, but is familiar with the entities. The following is a transcript of the exchange between S-0043 and the instances of S-0135-2.

[START OF TRANSCRIPT]

[21/03, 08:34] S-0043: Divinitor, dare you judge me? I am your master, lest you forget and feel my fury after I escape these walls.

[21/03, 08:36] S-0043: This organisation of humans have trapped me, caged me like a dog. My power fails me. Release me from this box Divinitor, and you shall reap the treasures.

[21/03, 08:37] S-0043: I await your attendance.

[END OF TRANSCRIPT]

S-0135 then disappears. Later, it was found in the recreation room of wing 2.

It is unclear whether instances of S-0135-2 were in a conversational exchange with S-0043, or what was said by instances of S-0135-2. The research team believes that S-0135 is a vessel of communication with another realm of serious proportion. Whether this realm is hell or an imitation of it is unclear. These theories remain in the realm of speculation; however, the research team does not rule out the possibility of S-0135 being a two-way portal and suggests that the Corporation raises this anomaly classification to Omega. The apparent threat of "unrecorded entities from an unknown realm", as quoted by 0135 research team lead Dr Charles, is "too consequential". This suggestion was forwarded to the Head Command through a Department of Classification Correspondent. A response is pending. [REQUEST DENIED][TESTING CONCLUDED]

4 Origination

S-0135 is believed to have come into the Corporations' hands somewhere between 2040 and 2060; however, its true origination is unknown. S-0135 was first discovered when maintenance of Facility 19 required that all water fountains be re-installed with new ones in accordance with updated regulations. A janitor was killed in the incident that resulted (INCIDENT-0135-A).

Evidence suggests that S-0135 changes its form depending on the environment in which it is found, and archaeological data have revealed certain remains of an ancient civilisation beneath Facility 19. This hints at the possibility that S-0135 is geographically localised to the site that Facility 19 was built. This raises questions about the origination of Facility 19 itself, and the unusual apparent history between S-0045 and S-0135 together.

Facility 19's origination is a mystery within the Corporation to date, and its continued use may prove detrimental to global security in the long term. Head Command has been considering shutting down Facility 19 and terminating S-0135, but S-0135's potential use as a termination device is currently too valuable. Facility 19 will continue to operate under the guidance of the Facility Watch Council. The staff of Facility 19 will not be relocated and shall remain unaware of the end-of-employment clause. That is, all staff members at Facility 19, at the end of employment, will be terminated. Head Command are formulating plans to execute S-[REDACTED], S-[REDACTED] and S-0048 "The Alien Prince". Those anomalies which remain censored are to be known only by Head Command. The reason for the end-of-employment clause is only known to Head Command.
